ORLAND LIBRARY WILL BE OPENED ON MAY 12TH

Orland Park Women's Club invites all residents of the village to an open house in celebration of the opening of a public library on Wednesday, May 12, from one to five p. m., at the Purple Candle Building, 143rd street and Southwest highway.

Plans for a library were first discussed at the regular meeting of the club in February, when Mrs. Paul Sanders reported that about fifteen books had been donated to the club by the Third District Chairman who would later have others to give to the club. Mrs. Orville Schmaedeke, literary chairman, presented to the club at the March meeting a plan for a circulating library. Using the books donated as a nucleus, the plan was that each person wishing to belong to a library association pay 50c membership fee; persons wishing to read the books but not desiring to become a member of the association pay a small rental fee. Income from these sources seemed inadequate for the purchase of new books, and further investigation was to be made.

Following this meeting, members of the library committee learned that WPA under its project 3358 of State Library Extension, will furnish books, a librarian, cards and records and a janitor to a community that can meet its requirements. These latter include suitable quarters for housing the library. Shelves according to specifications and heat and light.

Mrs. Ella Loebe member of both Palos Park and Orland Park Women's club as her guest, attended the library meeting of the Palos club to observe and make inquiry regarding the library there, furnished by WPA. They reported favorably upon this venture at a luncheon meeting on Friday April 23, at which officers and committee chairman were guests of Mrs. Edgar Graves at Euclid Hills Country club.

Other developments at the luncheon meeting were a tentative decision, pending action by the entire membership of the club, to make the founding of a public library its major activity for the current year, and hearing of a report by a district representative of the WPA library project, assuring club members that they could expect about 350 books with which to start a library, with more to follow, provided they were able to meet requirements.

A special meeting of the club was called by the president for 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon April 29, at the home of Mrs. S. S. Leavitt. Unanimous voting committed the club to the acceptance of the WPA library offer, and the financial responsibility involved. Plans for necessary financing are to be made by the finance committee, Mrs. Geo. Cox, chairman.

It was voted to accept the offer, made in writing of two years' free rent for the Purple Candle building, by Mr. Roy Loebe, owner of the building. Lumber for shelves was donated by the I. N. R. Beatty Lumber Co., thru its local agent, Mr. Geo. Steinhagen. Funds for a month's supply of heat were offered by Mrs. Inez Melchor. Many other Orland Park residents have made generous offers of help which include paint and varnish, building of shelves, painting and cleaning. WPA has donated window hangings and a small table and chairs for use of the children, and has offered to send a young woman once a week who will teach tap dancing and hold a story hour for children.

Library hours will be Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday afternoons from 1 to 6; Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 3 to 6, Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 9. Adults may have library cards on the opening day, but books may not be taken out until the following day. Children will be given cards also upon the opening date. These are to be taken home for signature of parents.

WPA's representative has assured the members of the library committee that their will be a good selection of both fiction and non fiction books. The selection of books is made by the State Library Extension board of Springfield. Donations of books from local residents will be acceptable provided they meet the requirements of this board.

Mrs. Orville Schmaedeke of Joliet, formerly of Orland Park is chairman of the library committee.

Seek Change of Mokena Post Office Location

Petitions have been circulated this week asking the Postal Department at Washington to change the location of the Mokena post office. One petition asks that the post office be changed from its present location in the Krapp Building to the west entrance of the One E. Both petitions will be forwarded to Washington for the postal department to decide which location to select. The change will go into effect about July first.

Well Known Tinley Girl Married

Miss Maebelle Andres, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Andres was united in marriage to Harold Meyer son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Meyer of Homewood on Sunday, May 2nd, 1937, at three o'clock in the German M. E. church, in Tinley Park. That day was also the bride's birthday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Charles Hedler, pastor.

The church was prettily decorated with palms and ferns and an arch was arranged beneath which the bride and groom were married.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Percy Jochum sang "At Dawning" by Cadman, and "I love you truly," by Carrie Jacobs Bond, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Schult at the piano. The bride's sister, Mrs. Clarence Bettenhausen, at the organ played the well known Lohengrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches.

Harold Andres, brother of the bride, and Elmer Soldan, cousin of the bride, acting as ushers were the first to enter, taking their places at the altar, next came the bridegroom and best man Arthur Meyer, his brother. They were followed by the groom's twin sisters the Misses Wilma and Marie Meyer who wore beautiful gowns of aquamarine chiffon, with matching flowers in their hair. They carried arm bouquets of pink roses and snapdragons.

Then came the maid of honor Miss Lillie Roemer cousin of the bride, dressed in peach chiffon with flowers to match in her hair. Her bouquet consisted of talisman roses and snapdragons which perfectly matched her gown.

The bride entered on the arm of her father. She was beautiful in a gown of white lace with long sleeves and a train. Her lace trimmed tulle veil floated beyond the train on her gown and was caught with a cap of lace and pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

A double ring ceremony was performed.

After the ceremony a reception for 130 guests was held in the home of the bride. Places were set for 70 guests at one time. Mrs. Harry Kuech and Miss Ruth Mundinger decorated the tables and rooms in white, peach and aquamarine. The tables were prettily lighted with many tall white candles. A sumptuous wedding dinner was served and enjoyed by all.

The bride and groom received many lovely gifts and congratulations from their many friends and relatives.

The basement of the church is now roomy and equipped with all the modern improvements. The members and friends of the Frankfort M. E. Church are happy and enthusiastic about what they have accomplished, and invite others to "come and see."

WHITE STORE OPERATOR BUYS 96TH STORE STOCK PAST WEEK

J. J. Cohen, owner of the popular White Store of Joliet, is nearing the 100 mark of store stocks he has purchased from other stores.

Last Saturday made his 96th store stock purchase when he purchased at a private sale, the complete stock of Underwood & Co., department store at Gardner, Ill.

The purchase represents the 96th deal completed by Mr. Cohen since he opened a small store a block east of his present four story department store. The stock in the Gardner deal consists of groceries, dry goods, shoes, yard goods, notions, women's wear and other departmental merchandise.

The inventory value was fixed at $20,000 by appraisers. The merchandise will be placed on sale immediately, according to Mr. Cohen, in an effort to offer his customers clean, seasonable merchandise at reduced prices in the face of a rising market.

The Underwood company was in business a number of years at Gardner and carried an extensive stock of high grade merchandise.

The White Store is widely known for its many bargain offers thruout not only the rural sections of Will County, but also thru the rural districts of southwestern Cook County.

New Tinley Mayor Opens War Against Punch Boards, Etc.

One of the first official acts of Mayor Frances A. Harper, the new Mayor of Tinley Park, was the opening of a drive against the operation of punch boards, pin games, slot machines and any pharanelia that borders in the zone of gambling.

Mayor Harper in a statement to The Tinley Park Times advises that he has issued a written order to Police Chief C. A. Steinhagen of Tinley Park to serve notice on all operators of the above mentioned devices that they must be put out of service at once and any machines found in operation after May 10, are to be confiscated by the police chief and taken to the village hall.

Mayor Harper in his statement, declared that he is opposed to all gambling in any form for the reason that he feels it has an evil influence on children and young people, also that the bulk of the money played on the various devices goes out of town to syndicate operators. He feels that if this money remained in the community it would be of real benefit to the community.

THE GARDEN MURDER CASE

By S.S. VAN DINE

COPYRIGHT S.S. VAN DINE W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER XIII

Vance seemed profoundly puzzled and said nothing for some time. Then he glanced up suddenly.

"How much light was there in the room?" he asked.

"Only a dim shaded night-light by my bed."

"In that case, you might conceivably have mistaken an empty bottle for one filled with a colorless fluid."

"Yes, of course," the nurse returned reluctantly. "That must have been the case. Unless..." Her voice trailed off.

"Tell me, when did you discover that all the medicine was gone?" Vance asked.

"Shortly before Doctor Siefert arrived this morning. I moved the bottle when I was arranging the table, and realized it was empty." "I think that will be all just now, Miss Beeton," Vance glanced at the girl somberly and then turned away. "Really, y' know, I'm deuced sorry. But you'd better not plan on leaving here just yet. We will undoubtedly want to see you again today."

Heath, who had been waiting in the passageway for the girl's dismissal, came in to report that Siefert and Doremus had departed, and that Floyd Garden had made the arrangements for the removal of his mother's body.

"And what do we do now, Mr. Vance?" Heath asked.

"Oh, we carry on, Sergeant," Vance was unusually serious. "I want to talk to Floyd Garden first. Send him up. And call one of your men; but stay on the job downstairs yourself till he arrives. We may get this affair cleared up today."

Footsteps sounded in the passageway, and Floyd Garden entered the study. He appeared deeply shaken. "I can't stand much today. What do you want?"

"We understand just how you feel," Vance said. "It was not my intention to bother you unnecessarily. But if we are to get at the truth, we must have your co-operation."

"Go ahead, then," Garden murmured.

"We must have as many details as possible about last night. Did your expected guests come?"

Garden nodded cheerlessly. "Oh, yes. Zalia Graem, Madge Weatherby, and Kroon."

"Was there any one else here?"

"No, that was all."

"Which of your visitors arrived first?"

Garden took the pipe from his mouth and looked up swiftly.

"Zalia Graem. She came at half-past eight, I should say. Why?"

"Merely garnerin' facts," Vance replied indifferently. "And how long after Miss Graem came in did Miss Weatherby and Kroon arrive?"

"About half an hour. They came a few minutes after Miss Beeton had gone out."

Vance returned the man's steady scrutiny.

"What time did your guests depart?" he asked.

"A little after midnight. Sneed brought in sandwiches about half-past eleven. Then we had another round of highballs."

"Miss Beeton had returned by then, of course?"

"Yes, long before that. I heard her come in about eleven."

"And after your guests had gone, what did you do?"

"I sat up for half an hour or so, had another drink and a pipe; then I shut up the front of the house and turned in."

Vance lighted another cigarette, took several deep inhalations on it, and settled himself deeper in the chair.

"To go back a bit," he said casually. "The sleeping medicine Doctor Siefert prescribed for your mother seems to constitute a somewhat crucial point in the situation. Did you have occasion to give her a dose of it while the nurse was out?"

Garden drew himself up sharply and set his jaw.

"No, I did not," he said through his teeth.

Vance took no notice of the change in the man's manner.

"The nurse, I understand, gave you explicit instructions about the medicine before she went out. Will you tell me exactly where this was?"

"In the hall," Garden answered with a puzzled frown. "Just outside the den door. I had left Zalia in the drawing-room and had gone to tell Miss Beeton she might go out for a while. I waited to help her on with her coat. It was then she told me what to do in case the mater woke up and was restless."

"And when she had gone you returned to the drawing-room?"

"Yes, immediately," Garden still looked puzzled. "That's exactly what I did. And a few minutes later Madge and Kroon arrived."

There was a short silence during which Vance smoked thoughtfully.

"Tell me, Garden," he said at length, "did any of your guests enter your mother's room last night?"

Garden's eyes opened wide: color came back into his face, and he sprang to his feet.

"Good God, Vance! Zalia was in mother's room!"

Vance nodded slowly. "Very interesting. Yes, quite... I say, do sit down. Light your beastly pipe, and tell us about it."

Garden hesitated a moment. He laughed harshly and resumed his seat.

"Damn it! You take it lightly enough," he complained. "That may be the whole explanation."

"One never knows, does one?" Vance returned indifferently. "Carry on."

Garden had some difficulty getting his pipe going again.

"It must have been about ten o'clock," he said at length. "The mater rang the little bell she keeps on the table beside her bed, and I was about to answer it when Zalia jumped up and said she would see what the mater wanted."

"And did you yourself go into your mother's room at any time during Miss Beeton's absence?"

"No, I did not!" Garden looked defiantly at Vance.

"And you're sure that no one else entered your mother's room during the nurse's absence?"

"Absolutely."

"And who was it," Vance went on, "that first suggested going home?"

Garden pondered the question.

"I believe it was Zalia."

Vance got up.

"Awfully good of you, Garden, to let us bother you with these queries at such a time," he said kindly.

"We're deuced grateful... You won't be leaving the house today?"

Garden shook his head as he too stood up.

"Hardly," he said. "I'll stay in with father. He's pretty well broken up."

Garden went morosely from the room.

When he had gone Vance stood for a moment in front of Markham, eyeing him with cynical good-nature.

"Not a nice case, Markham. As I said."

He moved toward the window and looked out. "But I have things pretty well in hand. The pattern is shaping itself perfectly. I've fitted together all the pieces, Markham—all but one. And I hold that piece too, but I don't know where it goes, or how it fits into the ensemble."

Markham looked up. "What's the piece that's bothering you, Vance?"

"Those disconnected wires on the buzzer. They bother me frightfully. I know they have a bearing on the terrible things that have been going on here..." He turned from the window and walked up and down the room several times, his head down, his hands thrust deep into his pockets. "Why should those wires have been disconnected?" he murmured, as if talking to himself. "How could they have been related to Swift's death or to the shot we heard? There was no mechanism. No, I'm convinced of that. After all, the wires merely connect two buzzers... a signal... a signal between upstairs and downstairs... a signal—a call—a line of communication..."

Suddenly he stopped his meditative pacing. He was now facing the door into the passageway and he stared at it as if it were something strange—as if he had never seen it before.

"Oh, my aunt!" he exclaimed. "My precious aunt! It was too obvious." He wheeled about to Markham, a look of self-reproach on his face. "The answer was here all the time," he said. "It was simple—and I was looking for complexities... The picture is complete now, Markham. Everything fits. Those disconnected wires mean that there's another murder contemplated."

He led the way downstairs. Heath was smoking gloomily in the lower hall.

"Sergeant," Vance said to him, "phone Miss Graem, Miss Weatherby, Kroon—and Hammle. Have them all here late this afternoon—say six o'clock."

"They'll be here, all right, Mr. Vance," Heath assured him.

"And Sergeant, as soon as you have taken care of this, telephone me. I want to see you this afternoon. I'll be at home. But wait here for Snitkin and leave him in charge. No one is to come here but those I've asked you to get, and no one is to leave the apartment. And, above all, no one is to be permitted to go upstairs either to the study or the garden... I'm staggerin' along now."

"I'll be phoning you by the time you get home, Mr. Vance."

Vance went to the front door, but paused with his hand on the knob.

"I think I'd better speak to Garden about the gathering before I go. Where is he, Sergeant?"

"He went into the den when he came downstairs," Heath told him with a jerk of the head.

Vance walked up the hall and opened the den door. I was just behind him. As the door swung inward and Vance stepped over the threshold, we were confronted by an unexpected tableau. Miss Beeton and Garden were standing just in front of the desk, outlined against the background of the window. The nurse's hands were pressed to her face, and she was leaning against Garden, sobbing. His arms were about her.

At the sound of Vance's entry they drew away from each other quickly. The girl turned her head to us with a sudden motion, and I could see that her eyes were red and filled with tears. She caught her breath and, turning with a start, half ran through the connecting door into the adjoining bedroom.

"I'm frightfully sorry," Vance murmured. "Thought you were alone."

"Oh, that's all right," Garden returned, although it was painfully evident the man was embarrassed. "But I do hope, Vance, you won't misunderstand. Everything, you know, is in an emotional upheaval here. I imagine Miss Beeton had all she could stand yesterday and today, and when I found her in here she seemed to break down, and—put her head on my shoulder."

Vance raised his hand in good-natured indifference.

"Oh, quite, Garden. A harassed lady always welcomes a strong masculine shoulder to weep on. Most of them leave powder on one's lapel, don't y' know; but I'm sure Miss Beeton wouldn't be guilty of that..." Dashed sorry to interrupt you, but I wanted to tell you before I went that I have instructed Sergeant Heath to have all your guests of yesterday here by six o'clock this afternoon. Of course, we'll want you and your father here, too. If you don't mind, you might help the sergeant with the phone numbers."

"I'll be glad to, Vance," Garden returned. "Anything special in mind?"

Vance turned toward the door.

"Yes, Oh, yes. Quite. I'm hopin' to clear this matter up later on. Meanwhile I'm running along. Cheerio." And he went out, closing the door.

As we walked down the outer hall to the elevator, Vance said to Markham somewhat sadly: "I hope my plan works out, I don't particularly like it. But I don't like injustice, either..."

We had been home but a very short time when Sergeant Heath telephoned as he had promised. Vance went into the anteroom to answer the call and closed the door after him. A few minutes later he rejoined us and, ringing for Currie, ordered his hat and stick.

"I'm running away for a while, old dear," he said to Markham. "In fact, I'm joining the doctory sergeant at the homicide bureau. But I shan't be very long. In the meantime, I've ordered lunch for us here."

"For Heaven's sake, Vance, what are you planning?"

"I'm plannin' to entice the murderer into making one more bet—a losing bet... Cheerio." And he was gone.

It was a little after half-past two when Vance returned to the apartment.

"Everything is in order," he announced as he came in. "There are no horses running today, of course, but nevertheless I'm looking forward to a big wager being laid this evening. If the bet isn't placed, we're in for it, Markham. Everyone will be present, however. The sergeant, with Garden's help, has got in touch with all those who were present yesterday, and they will foregather again in the Gardens' drawing-room at six o'clock..." He glanced at his watch and, ringing for Currie, ordered our lunch.

"If we don't tarry too long at table," he said, "we'll be able to hear the second half of the Philharmonic programme. Melinoff is doing Grieg's piano concerto."

But Markham did not go with us to the concert. He pleaded an urgent political appointment at the Stuyvesant club, but promised to meet us at the Garden apartment at six o'clock.

Sergeant Heath was waiting for us when we reached the apartment.

"Everything's set, sir," he said to Vance; "I got it here."

Vance smiled a little sadly. "Excellent, Sergeant. Come into the other room."

Heath picked up a small package wrapped in brown paper, which he had evidently brought with him, and followed Vance into the bedroom. Ten minutes later they both came back into the library.

"So long, Mr. Vance," Heath said, shaking hands. "Good luck to you." And he lumbered out.

We arrived at the Garden apartment a few minutes before six o'clock. Detectives Hennessey and Burke were in the front hall.

Vance nodded to them and started up the stairs.

"Wait down here for me, Van," he said over his shoulder. "I'll be back immediately."

Lesson for May 9

ABRAHAM A MAN OF PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 18:17-32.

GOLDEN TEXT—The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. James 5:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Abraham Praying for His Neighbors.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Great Man's Prayer. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Praying for Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Ministry of Intercession.

Prayer—how many are the books that have been written on that subject and the sermons preached, and yet how little it is actually practiced. One can attract an audience to hear it discussed, but only a handful will come to pray. We as Christians agree that it is God's appointed way of blessing. We put up mottoes such as "Prayer changes things," or "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of," and then (may God forgive us!) we try to change things ourselves. We struggle with problems when we ought to pray.

The lesson of today, from the life of that great hero of faith, Abraham, stresses the importance of intercessory prayer, that is, the giving of ourselves to pray for the temporal and spiritual welfare of others. In an age characterized by a grasping spirit of acquisition for personal advantage it is like a breath from heaven to read of this man's prayer for others.

I. The Nature of Intercessory Prayer.

1. It is a Privilege. Abraham had been honored by a visit from God. The covenant had been renewed, a son had been promised. The three visitors looked out toward Sodom. God who had thus appeared to Abraham in visible form and had shared the hospitality of his home now extends to him the privilege of sharing in God's purpose. How glorious to be on such terms of confidence with God, to know him and to know his will and purpose!

2. It is a Responsibility. "Abraham stood yet before the Lord"—why? To pray for Sodom and Gomorrah. Privilege and responsibility go together. Those who have audience with the King of kings are there to carry the blessed burden of prayer for others. Are we praying for our children, our families, our church, our nation? If not, who will pray?

3. It is Objective, not Subjective. Some modern "religious" leaders would devitalize prayer by making it a sort of spiritual exercise which has only the value of developing our own soul. The prayer room is to them a sort of spiritual gymnasium where the soul develops its strength and a spiritual sense of well-being floods the soul.

Undoubtedly the very fellowship with God which is inherent in prayer is spiritually beneficial, but prayer actually deals with such things as cities, men, sin, sorrow. It concerns men's physical well-being, their material prosperity, as well as their spiritual welfare. It is the means designated by God for the release of his power on behalf of the object for which we pray.

II. Characteristics of Intercessory Prayer.

1. Unselfish. Abraham already had his promise and his blessing. The cities of the plain were wicked, yet he prayed for them. Those who know the spirit of God are not selfish in prayer.

2. Courageous. Note the reverent boldness with which Abraham pleaded the cause of the condemned cities. The Bible reveals that God honored men who had a holy courage. History tells the same story. We celebrate this year the centenary of one who prayed boldly—and believed, and labored—Dwight L. Moody.

3. Persistent. No one likes a "quitter." Christ spoke of a man who was heard for his importunity (Luke 11:8). See also Luke 18:1-8. Some one has said that when we pray we are all too often like the mischievous boy who rings the doorbell and runs away without waiting for an answer.

III. Results of Intercessory Prayer.

The cities were destroyed, but the righteous were saved. God hears and answers prayer. This is the testimony of His Word, of countless Christian men and women of all ages, yes, of the men and women of our day. We know by experience that it is true—"I cried; he answered." He says to you and to me, "Call unto Me and I will answer thee and show thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not" (Jer. 33:3).

No Reason for Anxiety

Anxiety is the poison of life; the parent of many sins and of more miseries. Why, then, allow it, when we know that all the future is guided by a Father's hand!—Blair.

He lives long that lives well, and time misspent is not lived, but lost.—Fuller.

Talk About Smart Frocks

"AUNT ALMA, there's just one thing I don't like about my new dress—it's so attractive I'm afraid I'll have to wear it all the time. I'm not looking. Outside of that I'm crazy about it, and I think you're swell to make it for me. Why—"

"What's this, what's this? If that isn't a laugh. Aunt Alma! Imagine me wanting anybody's dress. Why since you've taught me to sew-my-own I never want anything. I just make it and that's that. This sport dress, for instance, took me only one afternoon."

Praise From Auntie.

"I think you do wonderfully well with your sewing, my dear. You'll be making my clothes the first thing I know. I feel especially pleased with my new spring dress and I have both of you to thank for suggesting this style. It does right well by my hips, and it's so comfortable through the shoulders. I guess I should diet but in this dress I feel nice and slender. Don't you see, girls, how important it is to choose a style that's particularly becoming. It's abiding by this theory that gives some women such enviable chic."

ADVICE TO WOMEN

MRS. F. R. Fogle of 2102 Lenox Ave., Beloit, Wis., said: "When my nerves were bad and I felt weak Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was the tonic that helped me. It increased my appetite and in this way built me up and gradually my nerves were better. I have a daughter who did not develop as she should. The 'Prescription' gave her a keen appetite and she gained steadily." Buy now of your druggist.

UNIVERSALLY POPULAR

The "Sunday School Lesson" published each week in this newspaper has been adopted by thousands of church instructors throughout the United States as a regular part of their weekly work.

It is a review and exposition of the international lesson for each week, prepared by Dean Harold L. Lundquist of the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago, a recognized leader in the nation's church work. Dean Lundquist has been active in teaching youthful groups for years, thereby acquiring an insight into the needs of these people for understandable explanations of Bible passages.

In view of his accomplishments in church work, it is not surprising that Dean Lundquist's exposition of the weekly Sunday School lesson is being used in almost every community of the nation. As teacher or student you will find it extremely helpful.

Auto Races Will Open at River Road May 16

Carl Stockholm for the last two years promoter of standard motor car racing at Roby Speedway, has leased the Fair Grounds track at River Road and North Avenue and will present the first of a series of five programs, Sunday afternoon, May 16.

Condemnation proceedings against the stands at Roby prompted the change to the Fair Grounds where a steel and concrete grandstand, beautiful grounds and every possible convenience for patrons has been installed. The track is a half-mile strip, 80 feet in width that will make the racing far more spectacular than possible on a mile oval.

Located on two of the main highways and only 30 minutes from Chicago's loop, the Fair Grounds should be one of the most popular spots in the Chicago district during the summer. A covered grandstand is also a novelty for automobile racing fans and will be highly appreciated by patrons who, heretofore, have faced the blazing sun at Roby.

Five dates have been awarded Promotor Stockholm by the contest board of the A. A. A., governing body of motor racing in America.

The first is May 16 and the others follow: June 6, July 17, August 22 and September 19. All races will be sanctioned and supervised by the A. A. A. and will have the full official cooperation of the Chicago Motor Club.

The most famous drivers in America will be on hand for the inaugural race. Entry blanks have already been issued and within the next few days the list of Fair Grounds starters will read like a "Who's Who" of racing. Practically all the pilots who will race at the Indianapolis Speedway, May 30, will face the Fair Grounds barrier.

NEW LENOX Around The Town

An interested reader reports that L. L. did a little cheating last Tuesday night and went out with S. Z. of Frankfort. Wonder what "Chuckie" would say?

B. W. claims she gets a kick out of sitting with other gal's boy friends, especially so, after he takes his gal home.

A. W. has given Diamond Lil a fresh start in her savings for her cat, canary and parrot. So far she has a dime.

They say V. K. tried doing the hop, skip and a jump, without any practice last Saturday night and got sort of stage struck when she saw so many people, as well as slot machine struck when she saw so many dimes—that she simply fell and broke her wrist. Wasn't worth the 13 dimes or even the thrill of getting them tho', was it keed.

A few would like to know how 'A' got burned a week ago Thursday night?

Diamond Lil and Graveyard, have patched things up again, and at present are going strong.

Farm and Feed Loans Available

Crop and Feed Loans are still available to farmers who are unable to obtain credit from any other source, according to Acton A. Shelton, field supervisor of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration.

Applications are being taken at room 211, Postoffice building, Joliet Illinois.

The money loaned will be limited to the farmer's immediate and actual cash needs for growing his 1937 crops or for the purchase of feed for livestock and in no instance may exceed $400.00.

As in the past the security for these loans will consist of a first lien on the crop financed if the loan is for the production of crops, and if for the purchase of livestock, then a first lien on the livestock to be fed. Landlords, or others having an interest in the crops or the livestock to be fed, will be required to waive claims in favor of the lien to the governor of the farm credit administration until the loan is paid.

Checks in payment of the approved loans will be issued by the region.

Higher Taxes—Or True Economy?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

During the past few weeks there have been increasing demands on Congress for curtailment of reckless spending.

From official sources have come warnings that the choice lies between a program of reasonable economy and a series of fresh additions to the already heavy burden of taxes.

Which of these two courses will Congress follow?

Each has its advocates.

To bureaucrats and politicians who must depend for their jobs and their popularity on a continued program of public spending, the decision will seem an easy one. Naturally they would have Congress oppose any program of economy.

To the average citizen who, either directly or indirectly, pays the taxes which officialdom spends, the answer will be similarly obvious. He wants to see his Congressman reduce, rather than increase, the steady drain on earnings and savings which now consumes so large a part of his income.

Unlike the bureaucrat and the politician he believes that the way to balance budgets is not by raising his taxes, but by cutting down the bills which he must pay.

By its decision Congress can demonstrate whose voice registers stronger at Washington—the politician's or the constituent's.

And in that demonstration the voters and taxpayers of America can find effective guidance when they are called upon to decide at the polls who shall represent their interests in Washington.

National Home And Garden Expo. Opens May 8th

With an eight-room brick house of modern colonial design completely furnished and equipped with latest approved conveniences and comforts including air conditioning as the central feature, the National Home and Garden Exposition will open Saturday May 8, at the Coliseum for a nine day run. It will have an attached garage. The front will be appropriately landscaped with lawns, shrubbery and garden settings. A reflecting pool will enhance effects.

Announced as "Chicago's most beautiful and diversified home show the exposition will reveal every phase of home construction, modernization, financing and furnishing. Cooperating in staging the exhibition are leading building material, architectural and allied associations and civic groups.

The show is dedicated to the Chicago Jubilee and Mayor Kelly has proclaimed the period of the show "Chicago Jubilee Home Week."

Work on the construction of the model house, designed by White & Weber, has been completed and interior decorators are adding the finishing touches in preparation for the arranging of the furnishings in its eight rooms which will feature two bedrooms, a living room, dining room breakfast room, kitchen, recreation room, laundry and heating room all on the garden level. An open porch leads from the dining room and the garage may be entered from the recreation room.

The house follows the traditional lines and portrays up-to-date arrangement of rooms and maximum use of conveniences to fit the pocket book of the average family desiring to build a new home. The new "autumn tint" brick was used in exterior construction.

The cornerstone of the model house is an archaic brick dating back 3,000 years B. C., an attraction in itself. The history of the brick is authenticated by the University of Pennsylvania, which presents it to the Brick Manufacturers Association of America. It was loaned by the latter organization for the purpose used to John A. Servas, Managing Director of the Exposition.

"The brick was obtained by the Joint Expedition of the University of Pennsylvania and the British Museum conducting excavations at Ur of the Chaldees," said Mr. Servas. "The date of the brick has been determined by Dr. Leon Legrain, curator of the Babylonian section of the university and a member of the joint expedition. The brick bears the fingerprints of the king reigning at that time."

Rebuilding and remodeling old homes as well as building new ones will be stressed at the show. Exhibits will illustrate how old homes can be transformed into modern dwellings from parlor to kitchen.

Landscaping will also be emphasized as essential to home beautification. More than 20,000 square feet will be devoted to this purpose. The center of the main building will be converted into a beautiful vista of garden settings extending from the north to the south wall and occupying 12,636 square feet. Garden equipment and fountains modeled specially for the show by Edgardo Simone, noted Italian sculptor, will add charm to the ensemble.

"Safety Town", a miniature residential community, will be constructed with models of homes fashioned by pupils of more than 200 public and private schools in a contest sponsored by the Keep Chicago Safe Committee with the co-operation of the Board of Education.

The Garden Department of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will show home gardens and methods of cultivation as well as types of window boxes with growing plants and flowers designed to be of interest to apartment dwellers as well as home owners.

HARROUN'S FIRST REAR - VISION AUTO MIRROR IN 1911 REFLECTED PROGRESS AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Ray Harroun was looking backward with his first rear-vision automobile mirror in 1911, but he was looking well into the future with the design of his winning race car.

There was a difference of two hours, seven minutes and four seconds between Harroun's time for the 500-miles and that of Lou Meyer a quarter century later in 1936, but science closed the gap.

The very latest in fast racing automobiles will be seen during the 25th annual race, the Silver Anniversary of the 500-mile contest at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway this Monday, May 31.

While passenger automobiles of twenty-five years ago look antiquated compared with the smartly-designed, high-powered models of today, the designers of Harroun's car were looking forward.

They used stream-lining for the first time, converted the Marmon Wasp into a six-cylinder car, and they proved that an automobile could be made safe even in a grueling 500 miles of racing competition.

Harroun, grim-faced and black-helmeted, drove his long, snaky racing machine over the Indianapolis bricks at an average of 74.59 miles per hour, defeating DePalma, Mulford, Wishart, Bruce-Brown and other famed racing men of the past.

Meyer's compact, four-cylinder speed creation roared 200 times around the two and a half mile Indianapolis track at an average of 109.069 miles an hour, an all-time and an astonishing record. The great three-time winner of the classic consumed only four hours, 35 minutes and three seconds compared with Harroun's six hours, 42 minutes and eight seconds.

Improvements that engineers of Harroun's era dreamt had become actuality for Meyer. Stream-lined speed, power in the turns, balloon tires, four wheel brakes all had contributed to Meyer's victory.

But those racing men of 1911 in that first 500-mile race deserve a cheer from the motoring public they blazed the trail of advancement to the automobile industry over those blazing Hoosier bricks.

I wish to take this opportunity to extend our sincere thanks to all who in many ways helped make our First Annual Band Concert a splendid success. The attendance numbered about 275 and the total amount taken in on ticket sale was $42.80. The home made candy sale netted $6.50 and oh boy the candy was surely good.

Single purchases amounting to 1500, were sold on the quilt which amounted to $77.95 in cash. Looks as though there still are plenty of people anxious to be the owner of a lovely handmade quilt. The money thus cleared will be used to repay the loans made when our sousaphone was purchased last month.

If by any chance you missed hearing us last week, mark your calendar for the 30th as we will do our part to help make the Memorial Day program an interesting one.

Tinley Legion Post Auxiliary

THE STORY OF THE POPPY

Mrs. Viola L. Carr, Unit Publicity Chairman, Tinley Park, Illinois.

Each year, just before Memorial Day, millions of Americans wear little red poppies on their coats. Women of the American Legion Auxiliary are on the streets all day on Poppy Day with poppies, asking all passersby to "Buy a Poppy." Of course you know that the poppies are worn in memory of the men who lost their lives in the World War, but we wonder if you all know how the poppy came to be the Nation's memorial flower?

As the American soldiers struggled forward through the shattered villages, across shell-torn fields and over blasted hillsides they saw only one touch of life and beauty in all that region where death and destruction reigned. This was the little wild poppies. Along the very edges of the trenches about the ragged shell holes and in the fields by machine guns, the brave little poppies grew and bloomed. Where comrades were left beneath the bare dirt of hastily dug battle graves, the poppies sprang up and clothed the graves with flowers. It seemed as if the gallant spirit of the dead had passed into the blood-red blossoms and that through the little flowers they were sending a message of courage and hope to those who still lived.

The poppy became the symbol of the dead—their memorial flower. It became the sign that the high ideals for which these brave young men gave their lives, still live, and are honored. That is why we pin on the poppy when we pay tribute to our World War dead. The poppy covers the soil in our hearts where the memory of the great sacrifice they made for our country is forever enshrined.

There's a special joy in wearing a poppy made by a disabled American veteran, when you know the money it brought him filled a desperate need.

There's many a disabled man today with a family to support and no compensation coming his way.

Not a few of these men can feel peace of mind today because they are working for a living—the living that means so much when there are many mouths to feed.

All poppies sold in Illinois by our organization are made by disabled ex-service men in hospitals.

Time For Teamwork

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

As every sports-follower knows, no athletic team, however brilliant its individual stars, can hope to win consistently until its members learn to coordinate their efforts.

This is known as teamwork.

It is a primary requisite to success in every human activity.

It seems particularly necessary in our national affairs today.

America during the past few years has been fighting a stiff battle against depression. The palm of victory—Recovery—is in sight. Yet it can be lost if lack of co-operation—of teamwork—among the various agencies involved, persists.

Extravagance in government, which handicaps the workers on whose earnings the nation depends; overloading of public payrolls, at the expense of all citizens; differences between employers and employees, interfering seriously with needed production; disrespect for the laws under which we operate—all these are the antithesis of the teamwork we need.

In peace, teamwork—the quality of striving together for a common aim—has built great nations. In war, it has won more battles than cold courage or shrewd strategy. As the simple verse of one soldier-poet has pointed out:

"It ain't the individual, nor the army as a whole,

But the everlasting teamwork of every bloomin' soul."

And it is this same co-operation that can bring us victory in our current striving for a sound and complete recovery.

Without it, success remains gravely in doubt.

So They Tried Parchment

Parchment for writing material came into use when an Egyptian pharaoh said that no more papyrus could be sent to Pergamum, in Asia Minor.

Cycles to Swim

ELEANOR HOLM JARRETT, former Olympic backstroke swimming champion, finds that pedaling a stationary bicycle keeps her in physical trim for her appearances in Billy Rose's Aquacade at the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland, where she heads a cast of 500 swimmers, singers and dancers in the world's first great water extravaganza. Appearing with her from May 29 to Sept. 6 on the 160-foot floating stage at the 5,000-seat theater, amid lighting equipment three times that of Radio City, are Johnny Weissmuller and Aileen Riggan, also former Olympic champions and motion picture stars.

Length of Suez Canal

The actual length of the Suez canal is about 100 miles, a little more or a little less, depending upon the way in which it is measured. Reference books do not agree as to its exact length. The discrepancy lies in the fact that it may be measured from the southernmost end of Port Said harbor to the northeastern shore of Suez bay at Port Tewfik, or from the De Lesseps statue north of Port Said to the anchorage in the middle of Suez bay.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

NO ONE BELIEVES
PETER RABBIT

IT IS hard not to be believed. Ask Peter Rabbit. He knows. Yes, indeed, he knows. It is bad enough not to be believed when one is not telling the truth, but to tell the truth and then have everybody tell you that they don't believe you is worse still. Anyway, Peter Rabbit thinks so. To make it worse, it was great news that Peter had to tell, and, of course, he might just as well have had no news at all.

It all came from Peter's curiosity to see the deepest part of the Green

"They Were as Big as the Tracks of Farmer Brown's Boy," Said Peter, His Big Eyes Round With Excitement.

Forest when everything was covered with snow. Of course, he had to satisfy that curiosity. It wouldn't have been like Peter not to have done so. So off he went all by himself way into the deepest part of the Green Forest, close to the foot of the Great Mountain, and there he found it so still that he could feel the stillness. Anyway, that's what he said. And it was so lonesome there that Peter would have been afraid of his own shadow had he seen it. He had made up his mind that no one ever visited that part of the Green Forest, at least not in the winter time, when suddenly he saw tracks. And such tracks! It was those tracks that had made Peter all his present trouble. You see, no one would believe Peter when he told about those tracks.

The first one Peter saw after getting back to the dear Old Briar Patch was Sammy Jay, and though Peter doesn't like Sammy, he just had to tell him about those strange tracks.

"They were as big as the tracks of Farmer Brown's boy," said Peter, his big eyes round with excitement.

"Probably he made them," said Sammy Jay shortly.

"But they were not his tracks, only something like his—the ones he makes in the mud around the Swimming Pool when he goes swimming in the summer, and you know as well as I do that he never makes that kind of tracks in the winter, Sammy Jay," cried Peter.

Sammy looked sharply at Peter and began to laugh.

"Besides," Peter hurried on, "whoever made those tracks had claws, great, great big claws!"

Sammy laughed harder than ever and in the most provoking way.

"Do you expect me to believe any such story as that, Peter Rabbit?" he demanded. "You better not talk to me about not telling the truth when you tell such a story as that," and off flew Sammy, still laughing to think that Peter should try to make him believe such a foolish story.

Peter looked after him and scratched his head thoughtfully. "Those tracks did look something like those of Farmer Brown's boy," he muttered. "They were rounder, but they were big and they had toes and—well, perhaps they didn't look very much like them, but they did look something like them, and I said 'something.' I believe I'll go tell Chatterer the Red Squirrel about them."

But Chatterer laughed at Peter just as Sammy Jay had. "You've had a bad dream, Peter. That's what's the matter with you. Who ever heard of any one in the Green Forest who made tracks like those. Why, Bowser the Hound makes the biggest tracks with claw marks, as you ought to know by this time. You've had a dream, Peter, and now you better run away and forget it."

It was the same way with Tommy Tit the Chickadee and Mrs. Grouse and Billy Mink, and every one else he told the story to. Every one laughed at him and no one believed him. Poor Peter grew quite miserable, for he knew what his eyes had seen, and it was dreadfully hard to be laughed at and have fun poked at him just because he insisted that he had seen those strange tracks.

First Aid to the Ailing House

FOR ECONOMY—COAL OR OIL?

A QUESTION that continually comes up is on the relative economy of heating a house by coal or by oil. There can be no general answer, because of the many conditions that enter in. For one thing, a coal fire run by hand may not be efficient; much good coal may go out with the ashes. It is unusual to find a household heating plant, stoked by hand, in which as much as 60 per cent of the heat in coal is actually utilized. An oil burner, on the other hand, when properly installed and adjusted, runs with much higher efficiency, and for this reason a comparison of operating costs might be unfair.

With a coal stoker, a more accurate comparison can be made, because of the higher efficiency that is possible with a machine over hand methods.

The running conditions of an oil burner are quite different from those of a coal fire. A coal fire continually delivers heat, and with no extreme difference in temperature between smoldering and burning with full draft. An oil burner, on the other hand, is either delivering no heat at all, or producing a temperature far higher than a coal fire running at full blast.

In a boiler designed for coal, the movement of hot air and gases through its inside passages is comparatively slow; there is ample time for heat to be absorbed by the metal. With an oil burner attached to the same boiler, the heated gases pass through at much higher speed; a speed that may not allow sufficient time for the metal to pick up a large proportion of the heat. Much of the heat is wasted up the chimney. Some boilers designed for coal have long passages, and are well suited to oil. This is the case with so-called "square" boilers that are made up of vertical sections. In "round" boilers the inside passages are shorter and more direct. They give good efficiency with coal, but are not well adapted to oil—moving at high speed, the heated gases are in contact with the boiler surfaces for too brief a time for maximum heat to pass to the metal.

Boilers with built-in oil burners run with high efficiency—that is, less of the heat is wasted up the chimney—than is the case when an oil burner is adapted to a boiler designed for coal. Boiler and burner being designed for each other, a high percentage of heat is utilized in heating the house.

Economy in burning oil thus depends on the conditions. With a boiler designed for the quick absorption of heat, the cost of oil may be low; but whether or not it is less than the cost of operating the same boiler with coal will depend on the efficiency with which the coal is burned.

THE SPIRIT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE thing we fear may come to pass,
Perhaps because we fear it,
Or else this world is leaves and grass,
With nothing of the spirit.
The thing we fear, if feared too long,
Accumulates the faster,
If feared too long becomes too strong
For any man to master.

The thing we dream may yet come true,
Perhaps because we dream it,
Or else this world is world all through,
And not the world we deem it.
The thing we dream, if dreamed with faith,
With faith that will not waver,
If dreamed with faith is not a wraith,
But something surer, braver.

The thing we are decides our way,
Perhaps because we will it,
Or else this world is only clay,
A hole, and dirt to fill it.
The thing we are, the thing within,
Decides, not things without us;
The thing we are will make or mar,
And shape the world about us.

THE LANGUAGE
OF YOUR HANDBy Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

THESE lessons in the language of your hand, remember, have been prepared to give you more than a mere smattering of palmistry. That is why the basic elements are being described one at a time and in detail. If you are to become really skilled in the analysis of hands, you should be thoroughly familiar with the fundamental characteristics and their variations, upon which the expert palmist relies for accurate results. Among the primary elements, as these are called, none is more important than the second finger, or Finger of Saturn.

What the Finger of Saturn Reveals. In making your preliminary survey of a hand, look to this finger as an index of the kind of conscious and subconscious thought which governs its possessor. The length, shape and inclination of the finger usually show how the mentality functions, and whether it is of careful reasoning or unreasoning variety, reflective or creative, scheming or melancholy, influenced for good or ill.

The ideal Finger of Saturn is straight and of pronounced length, not overfleshed or pudgy looking, with knuckles well but not over developed.

The tip is moderately rounded, with either a broad or somewhat pear-shaped nail, well set. Under pressure the entire finger should have a springy, resilient feel. With hand extended wide the finger should be fairly evenly spaced between the first and third fingers.

When such a finger of Saturn is discovered, you may safely place its owner as a clear-thinking individual of open mind, interested in worthwhile things calling for constructive and logical use of the mentality.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Several weeks ago, I reported to you the apparent necessity for presidential action in the direction of a curb on spending.

Must Cut Spending

I have written about this subject many times and I have no regret that I have done so, because for a half dozen years our government has been spending money too rapidly.

The President's latest message reviewing the budget situation indicates that the Chief Executive at last has started his thoughts in the direction of curtailed spending. Indeed, Mr. Roosevelt's message to congress in which he asked for a billion and a half dollars for relief purposes was characterized by quite a new note of firmness in his discussion of the need for cutting government costs. I think it is fair to say that in previous messages the President gave little more than lip service to the cause of economy in government. His previous suggestions to congress lacked force. Not so with the current call for a reduction in expenses. It had the earmarks of determination—but it yet remains to be seen whether he will insist strongly upon his conclusions when the showdown with congress comes.

The President's message was interesting in several respects beside the note of firmness, mentioned above. He confessed, for example, that there was no chance for a balanced budget in the next fiscal year. There is no chance, he disclosed, even for achieving the "layman's balance." That "layman's balance" ought to be explained for, my understanding of economics does not contemplate more than one kind of budget balancing, namely, income equalling outgo. But Mr. Roosevelt, in his campaign last year and in his message to congress last January, spoke of "layman's balance" as meaning a balance of income and outgo with the exception of expenditures for relief and for retirement of the public debt. I have heard it described in many quarters as a trick balance which I truly believe it should be called since it is not an honest balance.

In the January message, Mr. Roosevelt talked at length about the necessity for business taking on workers who were then on relief rolls. Only in that manner, he emphasized, could there be a reduction in relief rolls.

In the more recent message, the President omitted any reference to the responsibility of industry for reducing relief rolls by re-employing workers. That is not strange. The fact is, according to the government's own records, that industry is taking on workers at a more rapid rate than the administration had expected. But still there is no hope of a balanced budget this year.

So we must look elsewhere to find the reason. Instead of one, we find two reasons. The first and most important of the two is the fact that, by whatever analysis you make, the New Deal is guilty of continuing to waste money by hundreds of millions and it was not until a few weeks ago that any serious effort was made to choke off this drain, assuming the current effort is serious.

That statement sounds complicated and dull. It is not either one. The unvarnished truth is that Secretary Morgenthau and the flock of experts, trained only in theory, with whom he has surrounded himself, were unable to calculate what the present taxes would produce in revenue. Or, to say the same thing in a few words: Revenue receipts were far below what the Treasury experts guessed they would be.

Thus, the picture seems to be clear. On the one hand, the President heretofore has allowed the alphabetical agencies to run hither and yon in their money spending spree. On the other hand, the lack of competent financial men in the Treasury again is glaringly shown.

To get back to the question of curtailed spending I should like to call attention to the President's Sounds Strong; but— language in his latest message. He said that he proposed to use "every means at my command" to eliminate the deficit next year. That statement sounds strong enough. I question, however, that it can be called a program of retrenchment. In other words, Mr. Roosevelt was content in his message to congress simply to criticize, if not to denounce, extravagant outlays insofar as new commitments are concerned.

During the last few weeks, Mr. Roosevelt has called upon the various agencies of the government for statements of their financial requirements and something of a review of what they have done with previous funds. Considerable ballyhoo accompanied announcement of this survey of governmental requirement. But again, there was no evidence of specific determination by the Chief Executive as to what governmental activity should be restricted or entirely eliminated. It was like a charge of bird shot. It scattered. There was no target mentioned except in a general way.

There has been some talk that possibly Mr. Roosevelt's message and promise to use every means at his command for curtailing expenditures may have been intended as a message to his own subordinates that definite orders were to follow; that he intended his subordinates should see where they themselves could lop off spending plans, and could put their own houses in order. I hope it works out that way. On the other hand, I entertain very serious doubt that such a procedure will ever cause such individuals as the impetuous Mr. Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, to cut down on his spending. Mr. Hopkins loves to spend money. He seems to be happiest when he has billions to spread around, regardless of whether the spending plans really accomplish aid for the destitute. I suspect that congress alone can curb Mr. Hopkins and the only way congress can do so is by declining to appropriate extra money for him.

What I am trying to say in using Mr. Hopkins as the "horrible example," is that Mr. Roosevelt has taught his subordinates to spend money as freely as they can. To a considerable extent, he has let congress have a taste of new spending morsels and what politician does not like to spend money! Therefore, the President is confronted with the necessity of educating both his own subordinates and congress to the new order of conserving taxpayers' money. If he does not accomplish this, we will be saying in another six months what we have said many times—that we are confronted with national bankruptcy.

I cannot believe that the budgetary situation looks any different than it did last January. The difference in the picture is that Mr. Roosevelt at last has begun to see some of the dangers in the situation which he either failed to see or elected to ignore last January. There were few who believed in January that the tax receipts were going to amount to the estimate given congress by the President. The fact that they have fallen short of his calculations by four or five hundred million is a serious thing but it is not so serious that a remedy can not be worked out. The remedy, it seems to me, is a simple use of a simple practice among Americans: When you do not have the money, deny yourself some of the things you would buy if you had the cash.

Mr. Roosevelt's message asking for a billion and a half for relief served to get the collective mind of congress off the Supreme court packing plan only temporarily. The relief message caused quite a stir in the house of representatives where there has been a decided move already to continue appropriating huge sums of federal money for relief purposes, but it held the senate off the court question no longer than one business day.

I think there has been no question more frequently asked in my time in Washington than: "Will the President's bill to pack the Supreme court pass?"

I have watched the ebb and flow of the tide of sentiment in the senate constantly since the court packing plan was submitted. As the situation now stands, I believe Mr. Roosevelt has the odds in his favor. There is probably a margin of from five to ten votes on the President's side. Whether that will be the state of affairs when a vote comes, I think no one can foretell because the vote in the senate is going to be close.

Many informal polls of the senate have been taken. The results have varied somewhat. They have varied of necessity because there are many senators who remain non-committal, and who are unwilling at this time to take a position for or against the President's scheme.

One may properly ask why this is. The answer is politics. A good many senators do not know how their home states feel about the plan. That is, they are not able to determine whether there has been a crystallization of sentiment for or against the thing.

Consequently, these senators are trying to wait outside of the playing field until they can tell whether they can be justified in going against presidential wishes or capitulating to the President's command. It is to be remembered that if they turn against the President, they antagonize the administration and particularly the Farley political machine. It is rather unhealthy for a New Dealer or Democrat to oppose the Farley machine.

Another reason why many senators are keeping their own counsel on the court packing scheme is that they believe there will be something in the nature of a compromise come out of the hearings and senate judiciary committee consideration.

Man With Branded Hand

IN EVERGREEN cemetery in Muskegon, Mich., stands a monument which bears the inscription "Capt. Walker's Branded Hand" and below it a bas-relief of an open hand with the letters "S. S." on the heel of the thumb. This monument recalls one of the stirring incidents of pre-Civil war days and marks the grave of a man who played a part in bringing on that conflict.

Capt. Jonathan Walker was a Massachusetts sea captain and in 1844 was engaged in coastwise trade. Hating negro slavery, Walker tried to help seven blacks, who had fled from a Florida plantation, escape to the Bahamas. He was arrested, brought to Pensacola, tried as a thief in federal court and found guilty. He was sentenced to be branded on the right hand with the letters "S. S." (slave stealer), to stand in the pillory one hour, to be imprisoned fifteen days and pay a fine of $150.

After the first part of the sentence had been carried out, he was led again into the courthouse. Ordered to put his hand on the post of the railing in front of the judge's bench, Walker protested when the marshal bound it fast to the post. He declared that he could hold it firm during the ordeal, but his protest was ignored and the branding took place.

After his release from prison, Walker went back to his home in Massachusetts to find himself a hero and a martyr. John Greenleaf Whittier wrote a poem in which he besought Walker to hold his branded right hand aloft for all the world to see. Abolitionist leaders recognized in the incident a potent argument for their cause. Accompanied by a fugitive slave he traveled through the North and lectured on the evils of slavery.

"The Man with the Branded Hand" became a famous figure and he did much to arouse the North and put it in a receptive frame of mind for Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as a faithful picture of the horrors of slavery. In the '50's Walker and his family moved to Wisconsin and a few years later bought a small fruit farm in Michigan. There he lived during the remainder of his days and there he died in 1878, an almost forgotten figure who had played no little part in bringing on the greatest civil war in history.

Cap'n Streeter, Squatter King

FIFTY years ago it was only a sandbar on the shore of Lake Michigan opposite Chicago's famous "Gold Coast." Today towering skyscrapers, huge office buildings, a famous hotel and a great university stand on land valued at half a billion dollars. But Chicagoans still call it "Streeterville," thereby honoring the memory of Cap'n George Wellington Streeter, who battled valiantly against "them dern capitalists" and held out for 30 years before they finally dethroned this famous "squatter king" from his "Deestrick of Lake Michigan."

Streeter was a Civil war veteran who became a boatman on the Great Lakes. In 1884 he built a 100-ton ship in which he started for Honduras to take part in a revolution then in progress. But his ship went aground on a sandbar and the skipper found himself marooned several hundred yards out in Lake Michigan from the Chicago shoreline. So he decided he might as well stay right there. Out of the timbers of his ship he and his wife, Maria, built a little shack on their sandy island and settled down.

But the rich owners of property in that part of Chicago were extending their riparian rights out into the lake. As the little peninsula of filled-in land reached out toward the captain's island, which had been enlarged by drifting sand, they decided that his shack was an eyesore and should be removed. They called on the law to evict these squatters and five husky constables started out to do it. Cap'n Streeter put on his fighting costume—a high silk hat and a frock coat—he and Maria took their muskets in hand and the constables retreated hastily.

Streeter found an old map of the city on which the boundary of Lake Michigan was plainly marked. He contended that the "made land" was outside that boundary, therefore it was under federal jurisdiction and he claimed it by right of discovery. But the courts refused to recognize his claim to this "Deestrick of Lake Michigan." He and Maria were evicted time and again but they always came back. So the struggle went on year after year, in court and out of court.

"Cap'n" Streeter died in 1921. But his second wife, "Ma" Streeter, true to her promise to him, carried it on for several years more. Finally she had to give up the fight and Chicago's "Thirty Years' war" with the "squatter king" came to end when she died last year.

Dust-Proofing Pictures—Has the dust got into your picture frame? It should be examined periodically and new brown paper backings should be stuck on to make it dust-proof.

Date Pie—Two cups milk, half pound dates, two eggs, one-quarter teaspoon salt, nutmeg. Cook dates with milk twenty minutes in top of double boiler. Strain and rub through sieve, then add eggs and salt. Line pie plate with paste, pour in filling and bake in quick oven at first to set rim, decrease heat afterwards.

Oiling Household Machinery—A little oil applied when needed will keep household machinery working longer and always ready for work. You can use cooking or salad oil to lubricate small cooking equipment.

Cleaning Reed Furniture—A stiff brush dipped in furniture polish is good for cleaning reed and rattan furniture.

Stuffed Celery—Prepare inner stalks of celery. Fill them with equal parts of creamed Roquefort and cream cheese, mashed till smooth with paprika, and serve side by side on a boat-shaped dish, or diced, in place of celery and cheese. Or if preferred use creamed cream cheese for the filling after flavoring it to taste with pepper, salt, paprika, chopped chives or shallots and pimiento. A touch of tomato catsup can also be added.

Bechamel Sauce—Melt a quarter cup butter in saucepan, add one-quarter cup flour, stir until smooth. Add gradually one and a half cups of highly seasoned chicken stock while stirring constantly. Add one-half cup of hot cream and beat until smooth and glossy. Season with salt, pepper and fine grating of nutmeg. If a yellow sauce is desired, remove sauce from range and add the beaten yolks of two eggs diluted with one-quarter cup warm cream. Do not allow sauce to boil after adding egg yolks.

Angel Cake—One cupful of white of eggs, one and one-quarter cupfuls of granulated sugar. One cupful of flour. One-half teaspoon cream of tartar. A pinch of salt added to whites before whipping; flavor to taste. Cook in a very slow oven. Yolks of the eggs may be used for mayonnaise.

FIRESTONE TIRES AND AUTO SUPPLIES SAVE MONEY IN EVERY FARM OPERATION

EVEN though the prices of farm crops are advancing, the best way you can make more money is to SAVE IT in production costs.

YOU SAVE 25% in fuel costs and 25% in time by putting Ground Grip Tires on your tractor and all wheeled farm implements. They ride and pull easier and reduce repair bills.

YOU SAVE because one set of Firestone Tires will fit several implements. Your Implement Dealer or Firestone Tire Dealer has a plan whereby he will cut down the wheels on your present implements to a uniform diameter and weld a flat, steel rim to the end of the spokes. And by the use of Firestone Demountable Rims the tires and rims can be taken off one machine when not in use and applied to another.

YOU SAVE because Firestone Ground Grip Tires are built with EXTRA construction features.

These outstanding advantages are patented and used only in Firestone Tires. Gum-Dipping saturates and coats every cord with pure liquid rubber. This process counteracts internal friction and heat and makes the tire much stronger to resist the strains of the extra pull. The two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and body together into one inseparable unit of tremendous strength. The scientific arrangement in spacing of the deep, rugged bars of the self-cleaning tread gives greater traction and drawbar pull.

YOU SAVE by buying NOW as tire prices are sure to advance. The price of crude rubber has advanced 110% and cotton more than 26% during the past two years. Tire prices are bound to go higher. Buy Firestone Ground Grip Tires NOW for your cars, trucks, tractors and all wheeled farm implements and make money by reducing your cost of production. See your Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store TODAY.

The Farmer's Choice FOR RURAL HIGHWAYS

IT REALLY doesn't pay to drive on tires after the "non-skid" is worn off—in fact, the last 1,000 miles of wear in a tire are only worth about 35¢. Why take the risk of a dangerous skid or perhaps fatal blowout when new Firestone Standard Tires cost so little?

More and more farmers are buying Firestone Standard Tires because they get the benefits of Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process that counteracts internal friction and heat which ordinarily destroy tire life. They get longer non-skid mileage and unusually low cost per mile with dependable SAFETY.

It is almost unbelievable that so much tire could be bought for so little. Firestone developed this tire primarily for rural highway use and a tire of first grade quality could only be made to sell at these low prices by building them in tremendous quantities. That's why you SAVE in first cost and in cost per mile. You also SAVE yourself from accidents because they give greater protection against dangerous skidding and blowouts.

Farmers everywhere are making Firestone Dealers and Firestone Auto Supply and Service Stores their headquarters for all automotive supplies. You get greater values in everything you buy and you get all your needs in one place—including tires—tubes—batteries—spark plugs—brake lining—fan belts—car radios—home radios—garden hose and garden tools—seat covers—light bulbs, and more than 2,000 other useful articles. You can be sure when you buy Firestone products you are getting the greatest value for your money. If you have not received the new 1937 Firestone Auto Supply Catalog, write for it today—address Firestone, Akron, Ohio, or Los Angeles, California.
